

Rocky Road

Forget first class. Some people think it's time for kids class. A recent survey found that sharing a flight with children doesn't fly with many adult travelers. Some passengers say kids act unruly, or wild, and make too much noise. They want planes to have separate seating areas for kids and their families.

Other people, however, aren't on board with that idea. They say many kids are mature enough to behave properly on a plane and do not need to be seated in a different area.

What do you think? Should airplanes have separate sections for kids?

5th Grade—Opinion

In your opinion, should kids have their own sections for sitting on airplanes? Write an essay that clearly states your opinion. Be sure to include reasons and details to support your opinion.

5th Grade—Narrative

One way kids can travel with their families is by airplane. Think about a time you traveled with your family. Write a story that tells what happened. Be sure to include details.
